Burma Campaign Memorial Library

A collection of books and papers about the War in Burma 1942–1945

Introduction

The idea of a Memorial Library on the Burma Campaign first arose in 1995, when it was observed that there was no single comprehensive collection of books on what had been the longest continuous campaign of World War II. Would not such a collection be a fitting memorial to the tragedy and heroism and futility of war; a treasure house for the dwindling brotherhood who had participated in the campaign; a resource for future scholars and historians; and a measure of insurance that a campaign overshadowed at the time by the vast events in Europe and the Pacific, should not become a mere footnote to history?

As a first step, lists were obtained from the British National Bibliography, Whitaker’s Cumulative Database, the Bodleian Library and the Imperial War Museum. The Burma section of A. G. Enser’s 1975 Subject Bibliography of Second World War Books in English was consulted, as were specialized bibliographies such as ‘English-Language Fiction about the War in Burma’ compiled by Lewis Hill of the University of Hull. Lists of books in personal libraries were volunteered. Authors’ bibliographies at the ends of their books were scanned. Privately published books and unpublished manuscripts came to light.

So began what proved to be a four-year project, consisting initially of pledges of books from personal libraries. Parting with treasured books is hard, so those who did not feel ready to donate their books in their lifetimes were invited to leave instructions to their heirs. Such personal gifts and bequests are the largest component of the Memorial Library. On the flyleaf of each donated book is a bookplate giving the name and details of service of the donor, who in some cases is also the author.

Soon the search, aided by networking among members of the Burma Star Association and many reunion groups, became international. The war in Burma had involved the forces of many nations. In addition to books published in Britain, which constitute the majority of the collection, there are books from the United States, India, Burma, Australia and Canada. There are also a few books translated from Japanese into English, and a start has been made, with the help of the All-Burma Veterans’ Association of Japan, in assembling a collection of Japanese books.

After two years of voluntary effort, it became clear that finance was needed to complete the project. The Burma Campaign Fellowship Group, which, since it was founded in 1990, has done much to improve understanding between Japanese and British veterans, made an application to the Great Britain Sasakawa Foundation for funds, not only to buy books, but to contribute to the installation and upkeep of the Library.

To back this application, it was necessary first to find a permanent home for the Library, where it would be easily accessible to present and future generations. An approach was made to the Library of the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), which is the premier centre for Asian studies in the UK and has an historical connection with the war in Japan, since it provided crash courses in the Japanese language during World War II. The SOAS Library not only agreed to house the Memorial Library as a discrete collection, but to integrate with it relevant titles already in their collections.

After securing this generous help from the GB Sasakawa Foundation and SOAS, a further two years were spent in tracking down and purchasing rare titles, mainly through booksellers specialising in military history. There was also substantial correspondence with veterans of the Burma war in many parts of the world. Valuable manuscripts which were in danger of oblivion were uncovered. By early 1999, about 600 of the 750 titles in the bibliography had been acquired, a sufficient number to justify the transfer of the collection to SOAS and its public inauguration.

The launch of the Library is not the end of the project. Titles still to be acquired will be added. Unrecorded titles will be identified. New books are being written, and there will be more books in the future. A library is a living thing. In the care of skilled librarians it will last for hundreds of years. Its purpose is not merely to store knowledge and impart information, but to stimulate thought. Libraries are the vehicles which pass, from generation to generation, the lessons learned, wisdom, experience, and, less deliberately, insight into the follies of those who have gone before. In the Burma Campaign Memorial Library, dealing, as it does, with the subject of war, an infliction self-imposed by humanity – which at the end of this stormy century shows no signs of abating – there is plenty of folly to be pondered on. But mainly it is a record of courage, stoicism, endurance and sacrifice.

May 1999

The number of titles in this bibliography has now increased to 1025, of which 915 are in the Library.

A bibliography of Japanese-language titles has been compiled under the auspices of the All Burma Veterans Association of Japan. This comprises 634 titles, of which 311, donated by Japanese veterans, are available as of May 2001.

The goal remains to bring both collections as close as possible to the number of titles in the two bibliographies, and also to add new titles as they are published.

Prefatory notes

This publication is both a catalogue and a bibliography. Asterisked titles have not been acquired as it goes to press. (sc = soft cover : n.d. = no date)

Access to the Library is open to SOAS Library card holders and is free to Burma veterans, on production of their membership cards to the Burma Star Association or any other veterans’ association.

When there is only one copy of a title in the Library, it may not be borrowed, but can be consulted and studied in the SOAS Special Collection Reading Room. Duplicate copies of a title will normally be available for loan to eligible borrowers.

Only Japanese books translated into English are included in this catalogue. There is a separate catalogue of books in Japanese, available at SOAS.

The compilers will gratefully receive information about inaccuracies and omissions at the following address: Burma Campaign Library Project, c/o School of Oriental and African Studies, Thornhaugh Street, Russell Square, London, WC1H 0XG.

Titles are listed alphabetically by author in each section, except those added to the second edition, which appear at the end of each section.

Readers are advised to consult the Index of Titles/Index of Names for rapid location of individual titles.

MEMORIAL LIBRARY

The Library is a comprehensive collection of writings about the war in Burma from 1942 to 1945. It includes memoirs, histories, autobiographies, biographies, political and military analyses, essays, letters, fiction, poetry and personal papers.

Organized by volunteers from the Burma Campaign Fellowship Group, the Library consists of books donated or bequeathed by veterans of the campaign from their personal libraries; books drawn from the collections of the School of Oriental and African Studies; and books purchased with the aid of a grant from the Great Britain-Sasakawa Foundation. The Library has been assembled as a permanent memorial to all who participated and the many who died in the longest, and at the time, least publicized campaign of World War II.
